- Holbrook is a brand-new hard goats' cheese, created by Martin and Nicola Gott in Cumbria. When Coronavirus hit, established British goats' cheese-makers The Innes Family sadly found it impossible to continue to make their cheeses. Martin and Nicola decided to take on their herd of goats, bred specifically for many years to produce fabulous rich raw milk, and moved them up to Cumbria. They soon developed a hard goats' cheese that is saline, sharp and herbaceous, with a rich 'goat' finish. March saw the very first batches made, and they have just reached maturity.

Based on Langres, the pungent French washed-rind cheese, the rind of Edmund Tew is similarly washed to give it the characteristic orange colour and a funky-farm flavour. The name comes from a Mr Edmund Tew who in 1829, aged 16, was sent to Australia as a punishment for stealing cheese.
